COVER PHOTO: A marked cactus bug, Chelinidea vittiger, just prior to movement among cactus patches. A mark-recapture field experiment on cactus bugs reveals that redundancy of stepping stones interacts with the surrounding vegetation (i.e., the matrix) to guide patch colonization rates by bugs. With this experiment, Fletcher et al. highlight how path redundancy can influence connectivity for animals (see pp. 1444–1450). Photo credit: Christine W. Miller.
